Center for International Development
at Harvard University

About CID

CID People

CID Events

Research

Student Programs

Publications

Research Datasets

Resources

HARVARD UNIVERSITY

JOHN F. KENNEDY SCHOOL OF GOVERNMENT

Featured Books by CID Affiliates
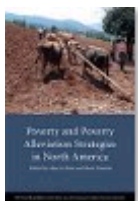

Poverty and Poverty Alleviation Strategies in North America

Let Their People Come: Breaking the Gridlock on Global Labor Mobility

Mexico Competitiveness Report 2009

Previously Featured Books by CID Affiliates

Rubenstein Building (Formerly One Eliot Building)
79 JFK Street, Cambridge, MA 02138
Tel: (617)495-4112   Fax: (617)496-8753

CID Site Map | Harvard University | Kennedy School

Featured at CID | This Month

Harvard: Support Haiti Earthquake Relief

Harvard Humanitarian Initiative Responds To Haiti

WEF Releases Global Gender Gap Index 2009, co-authored by CID Director Ricardo Hausmann

NextBillion.net: "Too Many or Too Few Choices? The Dilemma of Expanding Financial Access to Underserved Markets," by Suzi Sosa

CID Empowerment Meeting Focuses on Financial Access for Global Poor

CID and IOP host Kenyan Prime Minister Odinga: Africa "a Continent in Transition"

New Video: CID experts seek win-win solutions on migration & development

Sustainability Science Program offers doctoral, post-doctoral, and mid-career fellowships

CID in the News | Archive

CID faculty affiliate Rema Hanna's research on grading discrimination in India featured in Education Week

Business Standard (India) commentary on protectionism by CID Faculty Associate Dani Rodrik

Research on Argentina's Growth by CID Affiliate Felipe Campante and HKS Professor Edward Glaeser featured in New York Times

Bill Clark discusses the role of sustainability science in development

Harvard Magazine book review of Half the Sky: Turning Oppression into Opportunity for Women Worldwide. Reviewed by CID Faculty Associate Rohini Pande

Business Standard op-ed on the roles and responsibilities of the Federal Reserve chairman by CID Faculty Associate Dani Rodrik

Boston Globe op-ed on U.S.-Somalia relations by CID Faculty Associate Robert Rotberg