On Friday 9 March, from 7.00 p.m. at Guildford Cathedral, the Guildford International Music Festival will commence with Sculpted Sound, an inter-faith concert, featuring works by four composers of different faiths – Islam, Judaism, Christianity and Hinduism. This concert is one of the featured events of the University of Surrey's ongoing Inter Faith Education Programme. These new works inspired and based upon the sculptures of the late Deuk-Shai's sculpted sound instruments, made from found objects. The concert will also include a performance by pupils from Chor's College, Kings' College, Guildford Girls' Primary School, Durnford Junior School and Park Meadow School.

The concert will also include a performance by pupils from Chor's College, Kings' College, Guildford Girls' Primary School, Durnford Junior School and Park Meadow School.

The programme includes the spiritual setting of Guildford Cathedral as starting point. The six new works are inspired by different faiths or religious influences. At the beginning and middle of the concert, children from Guildford schools will present their own short pieces based on Deuk-Shai's sculptures. At the beginning and middle of the concert, children from Guildford schools will present their own short pieces based on Deuk-Shai's sculptures. These inspiring percussive sculptures are not only artistic artefacts, but produce wonderful sounds which the composer and performers owe to their full capacity.
