

No. E2006012

Health Shocks, Village Elections, and Long-term Income: Evidence from Rural China

Health Shocks, Village Elections, and Long-ter

在GOOGLE搜索此内容

2006-10-9 阅读3647次

Health Shocks, Village Elections, and Long-term Income: Evidence from Rural China*

Li Gan

Associate professor
Department of Economics
Texas A&M University and NBER

Lixin Colin Xu
Senior economist
Research Group
The World Bank

Yang Yao
Professor
China Center for Economic Research
Peking University

NO. E2006012 Oct. 9, 2006

* We thank Martin Feldstein, Justin Lin, John Strauss, Zhixiong Zeng, and participants of seminars in the International Food Policy Research Institute, Nankai University, Peking University, and the University of Wisconsin-Madison, for their helpful comments. Mengtao Gao, Shuna Wang, and Shenwei Zhang provided superb research assistance. The Research Center of Rural Economy, the Ministry of Agriculture, the People's Republic of China provided assistance in data collection. Financial supports from the Chinese Medical Board, the World Bank, and the National 211 Project of China are greatly appreciated. Corresponding author: Yang Yao, China Center for Economic Research, Peking University. Phone: 86-10-6275-3103; fax: 86-10-6275-1474; email: yyao@ccer.pku.edu.cn.

相关下载:

文件下载1

相关信息:

没有相关信息

相关评论:

没有相关评论 点这里发表评论

