The comparison of agricultural support
policies in the OECD
and the EU countries
from the perspective of

globalization
processes

Agric. Econ. – Czech, 53 (2007): 339-

The paper analyses the evaluation of agricultural and farm support in the OECD countries and its differentiated development in the respective countries. This is important, because the effect of subsidies on production, trade, income as well as environment, directly depends on the way how this subsidies are disbursed to the farmers. Another object of the analysis are the differences in the level of support between different commodities that may lead to deformations.
