As many as 44 employees of the Ann Arbor (Mich.) News and the Ann Arbor Business Review could take buyouts under an offer put forth this week by those publications, which are owned by Adv

The News reported that a buyout offer had been made to those workers who are among 260 full-time staffers at the two publications.

Publisher Laurel Champion said the buyouts were strictly voluntary and were "sparked by the state's weak economy," the paper revealed.
