The Logic of American Politics: A Research Agenda

Ni Shi-xiong and Zhao Ke-jin

Abstracts The United States is a special country with lofty ideal and high enthusiasm and the core political ideals of USA including liberty, equality and autonomy established American founding spirits and determined the American identity. However, the key elements of American founding spirits have not been in perfect harmony each other but have taken strong root in contradiction and tension within American political system since the establishment of the United State of America. With the development of the level of productive forces and American social-economic formation, the contradictions among different elements of American identity accordingly have been increasingly expanded which brought more and more pressures to bear on American political system. So, American political formations have been increasingly transformed to respond the external economical, political and social challenges. Tracing this clue, we can establish a research agenda for American politics.
