Article Planning for Service Delivery at Health Centres: An Experiment

Author G. Giridhar and J.K. Satia

Abstract India has committed itself to the twin goals of "health for all by the year 2000" and reaching a net reproduction rate of unity also by that year. To do so will require major improvements in its primary health care and family planning programme. This paper contains highlights of an experiment conducted in a district of Rajasthan State in order to verify the feasibility of developing and institutionalising an internal planning system that would improve the performance of primary health centres that deliver maternal and child health and family planning services.
