January 24, 2007, LONDON -

A painting by Charles, the Prince of Wales, will go on show at an exhibition in New York, the first time one of his original pieces will be displayed publicly, a spokesman for auction house Sotheby's said. Charles's paintings will sit alongside those of Pablo Picasso and Salvador Dali as part of an exhibition of paintings used on labels for bottles of wine.

The prince painted a water-colour of pine trees at Cap d'Antibes, a resort town on the French Riviera, which was chosen as the label for the Chateau Mouton Rothschild 2004.

The vineyard's labels have featured a painting by a different contemporary artist every year since 1945.

Also set to be displayed for the exhibition, at Sotheby's in New York between February 23 and March 10, are paintings by Andy Warhol, Francis Bacon, Joan Miro, and Georges Braque.

There will also be an auction of wines, including the 2004 vintage that bears Charles's painting, which was chosen to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Entente Cordiale between Britain and France.
