

As for the first part of the sentence, it is clear that the subject is "the man" (the author). The verb "said" is followed by a direct quote, which is enclosed in double quotes. The quote consists of two sentences, separated by a period. The first sentence is "I am the man." The second sentence is "I am the man." This repetition emphasizes the speaker's identity and his confidence in his own words.

