The Hungarian Nuclear Society

The Hungarian Nuclear Society considers its public utility tasks as consisting of development of nuclear culture and promotion of peaceful use of nuclear technologies to ensure that they are utilized with due skills and responsibilities in a controlled manner; hence these methods do not jeopardize the human health and living conditions, but rather improve it. The society works for advancing that the new opportunities revealed by nuclear research contribute to the protection of the environment and the improvement of level of living to a greater extent. The goals of the Society are to:

The goals of the Society are to:

- Promote the safe and environmental friendly utilization of nuclear energy and ionizing radiation
- Establish a professional atmosphere for nuclear professionals
- Promote the education corresponding to nuclear technologies, departing from the primary and secondary schools through the higher education encompassing adult education
- Inform the public through the electronic, printed and other media and forums
- Take steps against the misuse of nuclear energy and ionizing radiation, which may endanger the society
- Contribute, as professional civil organization, to the development of the regulatory system of nuclear energy and ionizing radiation
- Represent the domestic nuclear profession on international level

The Society has established several awards to recognize the work of scientists, researchers, teachers and professors in promoting, developing and teaching nuclear culture.

The Hungarian Nuclear Society has been the member of the European Nuclear Society and has been taking part in the international scientific life since 1991.

Last year it was the eleventh occasion to organize the Nuclear Technical Symposium of great success, which provides a Hungarian language professional forum both for the young and experienced researchers.
