The William Allen White School of Journalism and Mass Communications at the University of Kansas honored its top students at an April 24 ceremony. Dean Ann Beill presided at the event at Woodruff Auditorium in the Kansas Union in which 21 graduating seniors, two graduate students and one junior received awards. Scholarship recipients were also recognized. The awards in writing, editing, reporting, broadcasting, strategic communications and media management were worth a total of $7,000. Journalism faculty selected the recipients. Students who received scholarships will be announced by KU Endowment in the fall.
The Journalism School Service Award is presented to peers when a student demonstrates both high academic achievement and service to the school. Jarrod Mergentzen, Overland Park junior, received the award in recognition of his service as a Student Senate representative for the school, on the board for the University Daily Kansan and as president of the Public Relations 5. The Mergel Magazine Award was offered for the first time this year to recognize outstanding performance in magazine classes.
