On November 2008, an IOC delegation, led by the Chairman of the IOC's Coordination Commission for the Vancouver 2010 Olympic Winter Games, René Fasel, completed a successful two day project review of the Vancouver Games this week. The project review group, which also included members of the IOC administration and IOC experts, received updates on the progress that the Vancouver 2010 Organising Committee (VANOC) has made since the last project review visit that followed the Torino 2006 debut field in Vancouver this July.

Guidance And Assessment

The IOC group spent the two days of meetings, held at the VANOC offices, looking at the progress made by the local organisers in different Games related fields, including areas as diverse as athlete accommodation, sport, marketing and press operation. The reports from the Vancouver 2010 management team gave the IOC delegation the opportunity to hear and assess first hand the continuing progress of the Vancouver 2010 project. It also allowed the members of the review group to offer VANOC their guidance on any issues arising since the previous visit of the Coordination Commission.

Executive Project Review

Project reviews allow the chairmen of the different IOC Coordination Commissions, along with members of the IOC administration and, where necessary, other Coordination Commission members and IOC experts, to be updated on the respective Olympic Games projects in between the full visits of the Coordination Commission. The full Commission visits occur a year
