DESCRIPTION

As part of its Socio-economics and Policy Program, INBAR has produced 11 case studies covering the socio-economics of production-to-consumption systems in several Asian countries. The case studies on the bamboo sector in China, India, Nepal and the studies on the rattan sector in Indonesia, Laos and Thailand are the most of which were published by INBAR as Working Papers, an important socio-economic data.

This document highlights, based on the 11 case studies, the socio-economic and rattan that have relevance to INBAR's program on the economic development of rural and marginalized regions. It blends case-specific information with regional trends in bamboo cultivation, harvesting, processing and trade.
