The European Society for Domestic Animal Reproduction - ESDAR -

is a non-profitable community with special emphasis on reproduction in domestic animals and wild animals as well. The society supports all activities to stimulate education and research in the field of reproduction, especially for clinical aspects, biotechnology and physiology of reproduction. The society has a strong mutual collaboration with the European College of Animal Reproduction (ECAR). On a regular basis, the society organizes meetings and workshops. Cooperations with other national and international societies are welcome.
