12 March 2007, A cheque for £1,400 was presented this week to Breakthrough Breast Cancer by a group of students from the School of Management at the University of Surrey. All the students are second year management undergraduates. The money was raised at a very successful 'Black and Pink Dinner' held recently in the Lakeside Restaurant at the University.

The students, the self-named 'Think Pink Group', undertook the planning and running of the dinner as part of their Hospitality Operations Management module, which was designed to give the students practical experience. The task was to organise an event, in groups, to be held in one of the venues on campus, and any profit made was to be donated to a charity of their own choice.

The dinner was a great success with 68 people enjoying a gourmet three course dinner and live music. Amanda Jones, a Breakthrough Breast Cancer Volunteer gave a very poignant talk about Breakthrough and her involvement with the charity. The proceeds were further enhanced with a raffle which raised over £350 and an auction.

The cheque was received this week by Amanda Jones and Robin Legge, Community Fundraising Assistant at Breakthrough Breast Cancer, at a presentation in the Lakeside Restaurant. The students were thanked for a very enjoyable event and were complimented on how much they had managed to raise, a testament, they were told, to their hard work.
