

Distance learning dental launch

11/11/2017 10:00 AM

11/11/2017: Formally opened by the Principal of King's College London, Professor Rick Turner, the Centre aims to develop and manage the skills learning competences within the internationally renowned King's Dental Institute. The Centre will bring together distance learning, e-learning and ICT related educational research in an academically led physical and virtual environment.

11/11/2017: Formally opened by the Principal of King's College London, Professor Rick Turner, the Centre aims to develop and manage the skills learning competences within the internationally renowned King's Dental Institute. The Centre will bring together distance learning, e-learning and ICT related educational research in an academically led physical and virtual environment.

The Principal spoke about the increasing use of distance learning within the King's Dental Institute and the university sector. 'It won't eliminate other forms of learning but will complement and enrich traditional forms of learning,' he said. 'The launch of the Centre and EVIDENT will have very positive implications for teaching and learning in other subjects and at other institutions.'

During the launch proceedings Dr Patricia Reynolds, Deputy Director of Education for Flexible Learning at King's Dental Institute, introduced one of King's key collaborations by video conference link. Professor Cristina Paparella, Chair of the Dental School, University of Padua, Italy, and Thomas Li, Assistant Professor in Dental Radiography at Hong Kong Dental School (and director of MSc in Dental and Maxillofacial Radiology)

