Stanford PROFILES

Amin Saberi

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF MANAGEMENT SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING AND, BY COURTESY, OF ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING

🖶 PRINT PROFILE

✉ EMAIL PROFILE

🔒 VIEW STANFORD-ONLY PROFILE

Bio

Amin Saberi is an Associate Professor and 3COM faculty scholar in Stanford University. He received his B.Sc. from Sharif University of Technology and his Ph.D. from Georgia Institute of Technology in Computer Science. His research interests include algorithms, approximation algorithms, and algorithmic aspects of games, markets, and networks. Amin Saberi's research is supported by National Science Foundation (under grants CCF 0546889, 0729586, and 0915145), Library of Congress, Stanford Clean Slate Design for the Internet, and Google. His most recent awards include an Alfred Sloan Fellowship and best paper awards in FOCS 2011 and SODA 2010.

Academic Appointments

Associate Professor, Management Science and Engineering

Associate Professor (By courtesy), Electrical Engineering

Member, Bio-X

Program Affiliations

Institute for Computational and Mathematical Engineering (ICME)

Professional Education

BS, Sharif Institute of Technology, Tehran, Iran, Computer Science (2000)

PhD, Georgia Institute of Technology, Computer Science (2004)

CONTACT

📍 Academic

saberi@stanford.edu

University - Faculty
Department: Management Science and Engineering
Position: Assoc Professor

309, Huang Engineering Center
475 Via Ortega Stanford