The Value and Vitality of The Rules of Professional Ethics of Librarians in China
Ye Jingzhu ()

Abstract: A Librarian should strive for free of documents and information. But if he (she) is not responsible for any consequences resulting from their use, how can we understand his (her) moral responsibility for the society? The Rules of Professional Ethics of Librarians in China should give a clear explanation to this moral conflict between the principle of freedom and the principle of non-injury. Only in this way our Rules could be practicable and operational.
