II. Reading Comprehension

Section A

Directions: Read the following passage and to the multiple choice questions. (2 marks each, 10 marks altogether)

Here are a few examples of business customs in foreign lands that one should be cognizant of:

In Brazil, conversations can become very animated and involve physical contact and raised voices. Yet trying to dominate the conversation will meet with disapproval.

In China, it's considered impolite to reply negatively. Answers like "we should discuss this further at another time" or "perhaps" are much better than a simple "no". The details can be worked out later. When giving gifts, avoid using white or green wrapping paper as those colors are considered to be inauspicious.

In Germany, it's customary to wait to be introduced someone new by a third party. People are uncomfortable when approached by complete strangers.

When dining with co-workers in Japan, always let the host pay for the meal. Be sure to never leave your chopsticks placed vertically in a bowl of rice as this is only done at funerals. The Irish are enthusiastic conversationalists who often indulge in criticism of themselves as a people and Ireland as a country. If you're involved in this type of conversation country will be roundly abused.

Even in "close" countries like Canada, there are some differences in the way business people interact. Luckily there are many training programs available to familiarize business travelers and career people with the ins and outs of doing business the international arena.

Questions:

1. Which of the following is true in Brazil? Conversations can be _____.
 - (A) very interesting with physical contact and raised voices
 - (B) animated and anyone can dominate the conversation
 - (C) animated and everyone likes to control it
 - (D) very interesting yet people may disapprove to each other
2. In China, colors like white or green _____.
 - (A) may be used in any case
 - (B) are the colors people like very much

- (C) are usually not used to wrap gifts
- (D) are often used to wrap gifts for the foreigners
3. When having dinner, the Japanese people ____.
- (A) let their friends pay for the meal sometimes
- (B) should not pay for the meal
- (C) do not put their chopsticks on the bowls
- (D) do not place their chopsticks vertically in a rice bowls
4. When involving in a conversation with the Irish people who are criticizing their own countries, ____.
- (A) just feel free to join in their criticism and they will feel you are closer to them
- (B) never agree with what they are saying
- (C) you should criticize your own country
- (D) you should discuss together with them
5. Even in close countries like Canada ____.
- (A) people do business in the same way
- (B) there are training programs
- (C) there are differences in the way business people interact
- (D) there are no differences between business people

Section B

Directions: Read the following passage and decide whether the statements are 'true' or 'false', write T for 'true' and F for 'false'. (2 marks for each, 10 marks altogether)

In some ways the employment interview is like a persuasive speech because the applicant (interviewee) seeks to persuade the employer (interviewer) to employ him or her. Several suggestions might prove helpful to the applicant as preparation is made for the actual interview.

A job applicant has the responsibility for ascertaining certain types of information prior to the interview. First, the applicant should know what kind of job he wants and how that job relates to his career objective. It is important that the applicant be able to state his reasons for wishing to work for a particular company. Second, the applicant should seek as much information as possible concerning the company. Relevant information for the applicant to locate includes such items as the location of the home and regional offices, the financial status of the company, plans for expansion, and company philosophy. Information about most major corporations is available in reference books and periodicals.

After gathering information concerning the company, the applicant is ready for the interview. The interviewer's first impression comes from the interviewee's appearance. For most interviews, appropriate dress for men is a conservative dark colored suit with a long sleeve white or light blue shirt and conservative tie. For women a conservative, tailored suit or dress is appropriate. Both men and women should have neat, conservative length hair.

Although hairstyle and dress are matters of personal taste, many personnel directors form initial impressions from these characteristics. For example, one recent college graduate, who felt himself qualified, interviewed for a public relations job. However, the personnel manager considered the young man's long hair, sloppy dress, and overly casual manner unsuited for this particular position.

Questions:

1. [] The employment interview is like a persuasive speech because the applicant wants to persuade the employer to employ him or her.
2. [] A job applicant should be able to find certain types of information prior to the interview.
3. [] In some cases, it is important that the applicant know his reasons for wishing to work for a particular company.
4. [] After gathering information concerning the location of company, the applicant is ready for the interview.
5. [] Although you may have different ideas about hairstyle and dress, many personnel directors form initial impressions from these characteristics.
